START MEMO POST-OBJ:

To provide a strong foundation for an emerging Guyanese journalist that will positively influence that journalist as s/he progresses into a role of leadership within the Guyanese media community.

Participation in this program addresses Post's MPP goal of stable conditions in fragile/failing states. A media that can accurately report on all aspects of society is a crucial part of a functioning democracy.

Most Guyanese journalists learned their trade on the job.

Because of this, they lack some of the basic knowledge
regarding the rights and responsibilities of a reporter.
Participation in this program would increase the quality of reporting by local media. It would also allow reporters to see how the U.S. functions on the state and local levels.

END MEMO POST-OBJ:

START MEMO POST-RCMD:

Mr. Moseley has been active in journalism for six years.

Mr. Moseley works with an independent television news agency based in Georgetown. Although he is based in the capital, Mr. Moseley's reporting reaches many areas of Guyana. Mr.

Moseley focuses his reporting on social and development issues, health and politics. During the January 2005 epic floods, Mr. Moseley broke the story on the discovery of Leptospirosis, a deadly disease, and provided preventive measures to the public.

Mr. Moseley promises to be a leader in the Guyanese media as his career progresses. He is considered to be a journalist of high integrity. Participation in this program would provide Mr. Moseley with a greater understanding of U.S. institutions and how the media in the U.S. operates.

Post puts forth Mr. Nikolai Johann Earle as an alternate.
Although Mr. Earle has only three years of experience in journalism, he has received two awards for his reporting.

In 2005, Mr. Earle won first prize in Conservation International's Biodiversity Reporting Award. Mr. Earle focuses on biodiversity and conservation issues, which greatly affect the indigenous populations in Guyana. Mr.
Earle is a journalist for an independent newspaper and his articles are read throughout Guyana.

As Mr. Earle's career progresses, he too promises to be a leader among journalists.
